San Leandro Hospital (article attached)

- A turning point in the future of San Leandro Hospital occurred last week when Sutter Health agreed to transfer the hospital to Alameda County Medical Center, with $22 million in a fund to help the County run the hospital. Alameda County Supervisor Wilma Chan was able to assist in brokering the ultimate agreement. Efforts to keep the hospital open have been supported by the City of San Leandro and have been much discussed throughout the City over the last several years. The transfer is expected to be completed before November 1, 2013.

MARINA PARK GRAND REOPENING CELEBRATION!

SATURDAY, JUNE 1, 2013

SEAGULL PICNIC AREA, NORTH END OF MARINA PARK
9:00 A.M.

You are invited to join us as we celebrate the reopening of Marina Park. After several months of hard work (and a number of years in planning and design!), Marina Park has a new irrigation system and sports three beautifully enhanced group picnic areas. The sun shades, wind walls, seat walls and large barbecues are just some of the exciting enhancements at Marina's three group picnic areas: Seagull, Otter and Mallard.

The reception will include coffee and light refreshments followed by thanks and acknowledgement of the work done by so many people and the community that supports our beautiful parks.

After the reopening celebration, people will be encouraged to stay for the Relay for Life Kick-Off Ceremony to cheer and support the many survivors, walkers and volunteers of San Leandro who are raising money to combat cancer.

Sutter set to pay Alameda County $22 million to take San Leandro Hospital

San Leandro, CA

San Francisco
Business Times

By Chris Rauber

Sutter Health has a plan to give away San Leandro Hospital — long an unwanted part of its East Bay infrastructure — to Alameda County Medical Center, and to sweeten the deal with $22 million to help the county system run the hospital.

Sutter "would give (San Leandro Hospital) and all of its equipment lock, stock and barrel" to Alameda County Medical Center, and establish a $22 million fund to help run it, said a source close to the negotiations.

Sutter has given ACMC officials a letter of intent, the source said. If the county-affiliated system accepts the tentative deal, the $22 million could go into an escrow account by mid-summer and a deal could be consummated by October.

"After years of negotiation and discussions about the best use of the hospital, we ultimately concluded that Alameda County or its designee is in the best position to operate San Leandro Hospital and determine its best use to meet community needs," said Stacey Wells, vice president of communications and public affairs for Sutter's East Bay region.

Complex four-way talks involving Sutter, ACMC, the city of San Leandro and the Eden Township Healthcare District collapsed in early February, but some of

Wright Lassiter III,
CEO of Alameda
County Medical Center.

those parties quickly decided that a deal could still be recovered from the wreckage, according to the source close to the new talks.

Sutter lost $24 million at San Leandro in 2012, up from a $15 million loss a year earlier, Wells said earlier this year.

It earlier had a tentative deal to transfer ownership of San Leandro Hospital to ACMC, but Wright Lassiter III, Alameda County Medical Center's CEO, decided that San Leandro's risks outweighed its rewards.

Apparently the $22 million payment by Sutter made the deal more appealing to Lassiter and Alameda County. The move comes as Sutter's East Bay hospitals prepare for a possible strike by the California Nurses Association.

IC3 2012 Internet Crime Report Released More Than 280,000 Complaints of Online Criminal Activity Reported in 2012

Fairmont, WV – May 14, 2013
FBI National Press Office
National White Collar Crime Center

Today the Internet Crime Complaint Center (IC3) released the 2012 Internet Crime Report—a summary of reported fraudulent activity, including data and statistics. In 2012, the IC3 received and processed 289,874 complaints, averaging more than 24,000 complaints per month. Unverified losses reported to IC3 rose 8.3 percent over the previous year.

A new section in this year's report includes charts for each of the 50 states detailing demographic, complaint, and dollar-loss data. The section allows for easy comparisons and convenient reference. Additional content includes frequently reported Internet crimes, case highlights, and graphs that explain the lifecycle of a complaint. The most common complaints received in 2012 included FBI impersonation e-mail scams, various intimidation crimes, and scams that used computer "scareware" to extort money from Internet users. The report gives detailed information about these and other commonly perpetrated scams in 2012. The IC3 works to educate the public and law enforcement about fraud trends.

"The 2012 Internet Crime Report reveals both the volume and the scope of Internet crime, as well as the efforts of IC3 and law enforcement to combat these crimes," said National White Collar Crime Center Director Don Brackman. "As technology continues to advance, so will our efforts to stay one step ahead of cyber criminals."

Richard A. McFeely, executive assistant director of the FBI's Criminal, Cyber, Response, and Services Branch, said: "Criminals are increasingly migrating their fraudulent activities from the physical world to the Internet. Computer users who suspect or become victims of online fraud schemes—including suspicious e-mails, fraudulent websites and Internet crimes—should report them to the IC3. The IC3 analyzes and makes connections among these reports and packages them for potential action by law enforcement."

IC3 is a partnership between the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), the National White Collar Crime Center (NW3C), and the Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA). Since its start in 2000, the IC3 has become a mainstay for victims reporting Internet crime and a way for law enforcement to be notified of such crimes. IC3's service to the law enforcement community includes federal, state, tribal, local, and international agencies that are combating Internet crime.
